

TENACIOUS HOLD OF "JAP" FORCES IN SALAMAUA AREA IS BROKEN BY TROOPS OF MACARTHUR COMMAND

United Nations Fighters, Supported by Devastating Air Raids on Vital Enemy Installations, Drive Forward—Wrest Goodview Junction, Mount Tambu, Ordo-dubi and Komiatum From Enemy.

By International News Service

The fever of victory proved contagious today as American and Australian jungle fighters in New Guinea emulated their brothers-in-arms who hurled the Axis armies out of the stepping-stone island of Sicily.

Increased pressure by troops under Gen. Douglas MacArthur's command broke the tenacious hold of the Japanese forces in the Salamaua area of northeastern New Guinea and drove the enemy from four important strongpoints.

As the United Nations fighters, supported by devastating air raids on vital enemy installations in the area, drove forward, they wrested Goodview Junction, Mount Tambu, Ordo-dubi and Komiatum from the Japs and sent the Nipponese hurtling backward. In a significant communiqué, General MacArthur's headquarters announced that "the enemy is in full retreat to his citadel of defenses at Salamaua itself."

Then, the announcement added pointedly:

"Our troops are mopping up."

That it will be but a matter of time until the Allies wrest the important Salamaua base from the Japs was apparent, for on no other sector of the vast southwest Pacific front have the soldiers of the emperor ever been described as in "full retreat." Always, they have continued bitterly every foot of American-Australian advances.

Not a little credit goes to the Allied airmen for breaking the back of Jap resistance in this sector. Gradually-mounting United Nations aerial strength made itself evident during the last week, when lightning-like raids on Wewak airbase, 350 miles up the coast from Salamaua, smashed at least 248 enemy planes and killed more than 1,500 Nipponese airmen.

Meanwhile, to the northeast, American naval units patrolling the Solomon Islands area yesterday destroyed one of two small enemy surface craft off Dorel on recently-captured Vella Lavella island. Medium Allied bombers also attacked three barges near Tambala, hit a small cargo ship on the beach at Paraso Bay, and sank a large barge at Kakusa on Choiseul Island.

Other United Nations surface vessels were reported active off the coast of Italy, now under the guns of American-British artillery in liberated Sicily. The Algiers radio said that Allied naval units—together with artillery and air forces—have subjected southern Italy to a 24-hour long battering.

The long-anticipated invasion of the Italian mainland appeared shaping up as American troops dug in on Lipari and Stromboli, two main islands of seven taken in the Tyrrhenian Sea near the coast of Italy. These principal units of the Aeolian group provide the Allies with excellent observation posts for the forthcoming assault on the continental limits of King Victor Emmanuel's domain.

Further softening-up raids—carried out by huge Flying Fortresses, Liberators and Wellington bombers—left the Italian railway and communications in a state of confusion.

AN ALLIED AIR BASE IN BRAZIL, Aug. 21—(INS)—This is another of those "crossroads" bases common to the network of the U. S. Army Air Forces' Air Transport Command, and hence, it is a spot where one feels halfway in and halfway out of the war.

If you are coming from the United States after a short vacation from the fighting fronts of Africa or Asia you begin to feel that you are getting into the war atmosphere again to some extent at least. This is the place where you begin to sleep under mosquito nets again in an effort to avoid malaria. This is where you begin to be quartered in a tent or barracks again, and where you take shower baths out-of-doors and where you sit on

JAPS GIVE UP KISKA WITHOUT A FIGHT

Washington—The Navy announced today that United States and Canadian troops have recaptured Jap-held Kiska Island in the Aleutians without opposition—marking the first time in the history of the war that the Japs have turned tail and fled without fighting.

The Navy said in a communique that the Yanks and Canadians landed on Kiska on August 15th, to find that the enemy had hastily evacuated the island.

The Navy also revealed that American forces in the first 14 days of August carried out 106 air bombardments on Kiska, while surface units of the Navy had shelled enemy positions on the island 15 times.

Allied Warships Hammer Italian Peninsula

Allied Headquarters in North Africa—Allied warships continued their incessant bombardment of the Italian peninsula with a new 24-hour assault. Allied headquarters revealed today, while swarms of African-based bombers practically isolated the port of Naples by blasting its rail and road connections with the rest of Italy.

Selecting the railroad marshaling yards at Benevento, 40 miles northeast of Naples, as their special target, squadrons of bombers and their Lightning escorts spread devastation among switching points, repair shops and rolling stock and battered two nearby rail and highway junctions while shooting down four of 29 attacking enemy interceptors.

Simultaneously, B-26 Marauders, also operating with Lightnings, lashed the Aversa yards north of Naples and blocked the line linking that city with Rome.

This main rail link was dotted with gutted trains, while along the right of way at least one large warehouse was badly damaged and a number of smaller buildings and a gas works nearly demolished.

One of the wildest delights of recent days broke out over Aversa as Allied gunners shot down 11 Axis planes. Six other craft were listed as probably destroyed.

Bucks' Quota in Third War Loan is $6,846,100

Quotas for each county in the state of Pennsylvania were announced today by E. A. Roberts, state chairman of the Third War Loan campaign, which must raise more than a billion dollars in Pennsylvania toward the 15 billion dollar goal of the national drive. The campaign will open September 9th.

Mr. Roberts pointed out that the third war loan campaign is addressed specifically to individuals and corporations, since commercial bank purchases will not be included in the September campaign as they were in April.

"The state quota in terms of individuals means a $100 bond for every man, woman and child in the state, and $1,000 in bonds for every Pennsylvania in the armed services," Mr. Roberts said in announcing the quotas. "It means that everyone is going to have to buy more bonds in September than they did in April."

Bucks County sales thanks excluded in April totaled $4,170,500, and the September quota for Bucks County is $6,846,100.

One Man's Opinion By Walter Kierman (I. N. S. Staff Writer)

Well . . . Pop's in the army. No matter what Congress may think about it, the draft of fathers has begun.

Only a few days ago the majority leaders of Congress said there wasn't any necessity to talk about immediately to talk about legislating against drafting fathers of minor children.

They said that drafting of fathers wouldn't begin until October 1 . . . if at all.

So what happened? So on Tuesday, August 17, 1943 a Massachusetts father of five small children and a Pennsylvania father of six children were called up for induction.

And there you are my dear parishioners. The drafting of fathers is out of the theoretical stage. It's out of the discussion stage. It's here.

I don't know about you but me . . . well . . . I'd rather have some inscription on my tombstone than "He was a member of the draft board which was the first to call up the father of six young children for military service."

Thought for the day: Uncle Sam gains two soldiers. Eleven children lose their fathers.

Valuable Cow Wounded By .22 Calibre Bullet

NEWTOWN, Aug. 21—A valuable cow in the George School herd was shot recently, a .22 calibre bullet being found in "Burma," high producing member of the herd.

The cow, wounded in the udder, had been pasturing in a field on Buck Road. It is not determined as yet if the animal will recover.

This report of Farm Manager William S. DeCon to the George School farm committee raised the question of the wisdom of allowing visitors to roam the woods and meadows.

The reaction of the committee to this reported "accident" was to question seriously the policy of permitting visitors to roam the woods and meadows belonging to the school as has been the custom. Swimmers, fishermen and other nature lovers have been allowed to make use of the creeks and woods so long as they behaved themselves and did not disturb the fences and livestock. The committee instructed Howard M. Buckman, superintendent, to observe carefully the behavior and actions of visitors and if there is any further indication of carelessness or vandalism, they felt it will be necessary to post the property and treat all visitors as trespassers. It is the hope of the George School authorities that such a move will not be necessary.

PREWAR SNAPSHOTS

A few days ago the New York Times called attention in its editorial columns to the importance of tourist snapshots taken in time of peace when prosperous Americans thought nothing of a round-the-world cruise. These photographs have become valuable in time of war as aids to the military in its quest of weak spots in enemy defense.

The British government has a tremendous collection of these snapshots, 5,000,000 in all, taken by tourists in the good old days before frontiers were closed and cameras taboo. It is unnecessary to point out that English experts are not interested in these pictures for sentimental reasons. Nor are they interested in the personalities portrayed. They are looking primarily at foreground, background and middle distance, noting road conditions, shore lines, railroad stations, harbor facilities, airports and other photographic evidence useful to the military mind.

Col. William J. Donovan, speaking for the Office of Strategic Services, has asked the American public to help with an American collection similar to the one the British have amassed. Those who traveled, camera in hand, through Axis nations or through countries now under Axis domination, may have something useful to offer in that album now packed away in the attic.

Peace-time wanderers in the Pacific may be unwittingly hoarding valuable pictorial data. What was just a picture of Aunt Emma and Uncle Jim looking rather foolish on a Pacific beach, may be the equivalent of so much dynamite for the Japs.

THE LECTURE SYSTEM

The president of Sarah Lawrence College, Constance Warren, has doomed the lecture system in colleges with the statement that "the lecture system is slated for retirement; it is a relic of the middle ages."

With the part of this announcement that comes after the semicolon there can be no quarrel. It is reasonable to believe that the lecture system was inevitable in the days before the printing press, when, as Miss Warren says, books were so scarce that the professor lectured from the one available copy and students took careful notes in order to reproduce the book for their own personal.

Why, then, has the lecture system persisted so long? Books of all sorts have been plentiful for generations. If the lecture system is faulty, why did it outlive other faulty systems of the middle ages, such as feudalism, for instance?

One trouble with Miss Warren's argument is that she places too much emphasis on the printed word, now plentiful, and too little on the importance of personality in teaching. The great teacher is as rare today as he was during the middle ages.

His job is not so much to fill empty heads with facts as it is to inspire a love of learning in the inexperienced mind. His own personality is vitally important here. When he lectures, he does not lecture from a book.

Allies' Brazil Base Vital To War Effort

hundreds under the stars to watch movies from home.

You would do the same things on the Gold Coast or in Liberia or in French West Africa or at any of the Air Transport Command bases across the Sahara.

A brief visit to the giant runways also brings home to you the fact that you are on your way back to the war. For large fleets of many different types of combat planes arrive at frequent intervals from the United States, then shove on across the South Atlantic. Huge transports laden with war supplies and high priority passengers on war assignments come and go constantly.

Wendell Wilkie went through on his globe-encircling trip in the autumn of 1942. Madame Chiang Kai-shek visited here briefly en route home to China a few weeks back. One of my fellow passengers on an African-bound plane tomorrow will be Dr. Paul Van Zeeland, prime minister of the Belgian government in exile.

Yet there are things around here which seem very remote from the war, too. An officers' club, with well-stocked sideboards, is open daily. Fancy Brazilian boots can be purchased at the Post Exchange without the necessity of producing a ration card.

So are silk stockings in tremendous lots, and all transients—soldiers, officers and civilians (including war correspondents)—always try to get into town to buy half a dozen pairs or so for wives or sweethearts back home.

It would be hard to guess whether visitors buy more pairs of silk stockings or more pairs of leather boots. It's a fact that on the various war fronts, especially at air corps bases, you can tell which of the men came through Brazil and which came overseas by ship.

Those who came through Brazil invariably have a pair of boots. On our plane tomorrow, for example, three or four of the passengers will be wearing them. And I wouldn't be surprised if Dr. Van Zeeland, the fourth passenger, has a pair tucked away somewhere, too.

Anyhow, these things have no relation to total war, and that is what I mean when I say one feels half-way in and half-way out down here. Morale always is hard to maintain at a base like this, thousands of miles from any fighting zone. Most of the soldiers know they're not going to war and thus it is hard for them to take their training very seriously and hard to be very meticulous about such things as military courtesy. At that, morale seems better here than at many such bases I have visited.

And in a base like this one always finds officers who talk endlessly about how much they'd like to get into combat. Many of them are taking through their hats. But here I found two topnotch officers ready serious about it, so I hope they get their wish.

They are Capt. George Collins, the lone provost marshal who was graduated from Penn State College and served a couple of hitchhikes at an enlisted soldier before the war, and Lieut. John A. Carroll, of 15 Glen Burnie Road, West Roxbury, Mass., a Massachusetts state police officer on leave, who leads a military police unit.

"I'm not exactly kicking, understand, but actually I saw more action with the state police than I do down here," Carroll told me.

One of my most enjoyable evenings on the base was consumed by a "bull session" in Carroll's barracks at which Captain Collins and an old friend of his, Lieut. Albert (Packy) Fallon, of 1678 Nelson Avenue, New York City, hashed over the times they had together as enlisted men in the Hawaiian Islands. Most of the stuff was of the "off the record" variety.

Packy Fallon is nearing completion of his 30th year in the Army and will retire after the war. He has a large family including two sons in the service—Second Lieut. Dan Fallon of the coast artillery and Buck Private William H. Fallon.

Visiting Brazilian villages near the air base, one sees living conditions not much better than those of West African natives, but probably this is one of the poorest parts of Brazil. I did see evidence of forthcoming improvement in the agricultural situation, however. Several vast acreages have been cleared off and cultivated recently under direction of the Brazilian government.

I was told, by grants from an American foundation. One farm has been established nearby for workers who perform the farm raising of pigs. The Brazilian laborers will share in the profits.

I asked an officer at the air field what Brazilian entry into the war has meant to the Allies as far as he was concerned.

"Well, the Germans pioneered this base," he said. "Stick around and you'll see a Junkers 52 transport land here which the Brazilian government seized when it broke off with the Axis. It is a sort of a symbol of the way the Axis had penetrated into Brazil's economic life."

The Crimson Thread by LILIAN LAUFERTY

SYNOPSIS

Hilda Glenn is relating the weird beginning of a reign of terror that put Havenhurst-on-Sea in headlines. Hilda, author of a hit radio serial, "Love's Wages," just returned to her old family summer home, Glennacres, at Havenhurst, is confronted with what she calls "the murder" of a red setter, Hilda and her neighbors—Pete Everard, a male menace and would-be play-wright; his wife, Nancy; and the latter's former flame, Jack Drummond, a prosecuting State's Attorney—are dining in the Everard home when Commodore Henry Knowlton, elderly and pompous, calls. He says his wife, "Aunt Flo," thought she "saw a ghost."

Hilda had known the creaky Commodore since childhood. Some blamed him for the accidental death of her parents about ten years before. He was Pete's uncle and guardian. He carried a heavy, gold knobbed walking stick which he brandished during a clash with Pete over mention of the drowning of his grandson, Henry Knowlton, III, and his setter, "Red Rufus," years ago. Hilda assured all that she had seen a dying red setter that day. Suddenly a voice from within declared: "You can't lay a ghost with a blow of your cane, Henry." . . . And the Commodore's aged wife entered, seemingly in a daze. The Commodore stayed an ugly scene when his wife asked that he produce Pete's play, after Pete had a brief clash with Wing, the Everards' Japanese houseboy. The next day, Mrs. Higgins, Hilda's housekeeper, says that "this place is haunted," and that "Hank" Knowlton had killed himself. "He had such fun out of life. More than he could pay for." Mrs. Higgins tells of working for the Knowltons and says Mrs. K. is "stark crazy," and warns Hilda to be on her guard. Pam Drury, star of "Love's Wages," and Greg Mason, radio executive, arrive in the latter's new sport model. Pete,

Mrs. Eric Knight Gains Commission with WAC

Mrs. Jere Knight, widow of Major Eric Knight, former Philadelphia newspaper man and author of several best sellers, last week was granted the wish she expressed after he was killed in an Army airplane crash in Dutch Guiana last January—to carry on his service to the country.

She was commissioned a third officer in the Women's Army Corps, equivalent to a second lieutenant, at Fort Des Moines, Iowa. Her home is in Pleasant Valley, five miles north of Quakertown. She is a former University of Pennsylvania fencing captain. She and Knight were married here in 1932.

The Knights formerly lived in Bucks County.

FLEETWINGS NINE EKES OUT CLOSE WIN IN BALL GAME

Aircrafters Defeat Aberdeen

2 WALKS WIN GAME

Fleetwings Workers Outthit
The Visiting Team
9 to 6

The Fleetwings nine came from behind to eke out a close 5-4 triumph over the Aberdeen Proving Ground Military Police nine last evening on the Bristol high school field.

Two walks, the only ones issued by "Ike" Eckard, gave the aircraft workers the victory with two out in the final inning. With one out, Miksis had singled to center and F. Barbetta followed with a hit to the same place. Breslin hit to Eckard and Miksis was forced at third. Manager Russ Stanton sent in D'Asendis to bat for DeBlasio and he drew a pass. Bert Barbetta batted for Hirst and he also walked to force in F. Barbetta with the winning run.

The Fleetwings out-hit the Military Police, 9 to 6, and Bill Wolf was the only localite to get more than one hit. For Aberdeen, Guth had a pair of hits. Both sides had four errors.

Bob Stout did the hill work for the Fleetwings team and did a fine job. The quartet of markers scored by the visiting club were mostly the result of errors with only one run being earned. Fleetwings had three of their four errors in the second and third innings when Aberdeen counted its tallies.

Fleetwings also took advantage of mis-plays to score. In the first, Wolf singled, was sacrificed to second, and scored on an error by Eckard. In the fourth, after Markis made an error, Hirst and Gielow singled. When Stout hit safely, Hirst and Gielow scored, the latter making the plate when Lunn dropped the ball.

Barbetta's error and an error by Stout gave the Aberdeen team a duo of runs in the second while two more were counted in the third when MacDonald and Winland doubled. Miksis errored on Eckard's grounder, and Ventiquattro hit safely.

communications center of Foggia a smoking ruin.

In Russia, meanwhile, the Soviet Army pressed forward along a 100-mile front extending from north of Leningrad to well into the Ukraine. diets. The drives aimed at Kharkov, N. Bryansk and Smolensk all were going well, while the Berlin radio said still another offensive had been launched by the Soviets.

The Berlin radio said the Russians opened a mass attack on the Finnish front between Leningrad and Murmansk. In the Ukraine strong tank and infantry units were steadily cutting down the Nazis' escape corridor southwest of embattled Kharkov, while more than 20 other inhabited localities fell to the Soviet forces tightening their grip on the city. On other sectors, Red soldiers inched forward.

Considerable attention, meanwhile, continued to center upon the Roosevelt-Churchill conference in Quebec. Although the subject of the discussions is, and will remain so for quite some time, matter for conjecture, there were indications that the leaders of the two main English-speaking nations met to map plans for knocking Japan out of the war before turning their all-out attention on an invasion of Hitler's fortress Europa.

Such strategy would, of course, represent a radical departure from hitherto expressed objectives but the absence of Russian representatives from the parleys seems to bear out the belief that Japan at least is coming in for its share of attention by the two statesmen.

A decision to smash Japan now might be quite timely in view of the assertion yesterday by Vice Admiral DeWitt C. Ramsey, Bureau of Naval Aeronautics chief, who recently returned from operations in the southwest Pacific. He said the Japs in that area were "loathe" to come out and fight United Nations naval forces, adding:

"They just don't want to take a bad licking."

Factory Sup't Shot; Mistaken For Thief

Philadelphia—Shot by a Germantown resident who mistook him for a thief, Henry Lehman, 31, factory superintendent of the Bendix Corporation's Philadelphia plant, was in a serious condition today.

Herman Plusch, 31, of Chestnut Hill, was charged with aggravated assault and battery by shooting and will have a hearing later in the day. Lehman was returning from a farwell banquet in Philadelphia for another Bendix executive when the shooting occurred. He had left his automobile at Chestnut Hill station earlier in the evening and on his way home tried to start Plusch's car by mistake.

Plusch, whose home had been the scene of an attempted robbery last week, shot the Bendix superintendent under the armpit as he attempted to start the car.

Appeal to Danes to Halt Sabotage

New York—King Christian of Denmark, and Werner Best, Nazi "representative" in that strife-ridden land today issued an appeal to the Danes to halt their sabotage, NBC correspondent David Anderson reported from Stockholm.

The appeal, Anderson declared, was couched with a threat that unless the sabotage is halted the nation's food and fuel situation will be endangered. It also was stressed, he added, "that Denmark's present form of government is dependent upon the cessation of sabotage."

Anderson expressed the opinion that, at least for the time being, the crisis in Danish affairs probably is over. His broadcast came only a few hours after Axis sources asserted that strikers at Odense, Denmark, had voted to return to work today even as observers in London were quoted as believing the outbreaks of sabotage among the Danes showed evidence of Allied intelligence agents' handwork.

ceilings into one or two other rooms. The firemen covered the contents of the other rooms with tarpaulins as well as the furniture in the office of John L. Kilcoyne, Esq., which is on the first floor of the same building.

First Assistant Joseph Buck was in charge of the firemen, Chief Clifford Hagerman being away on a vacation.

A detail of emergency police supplemented the borough police officers in detouring traffic so as to afford the firemen plenty of room to work.

The firemen did quick work and soon had the blaze under control. The structure is of brick.

Price Panel Board Issues Bulletin On Prices of Eggs

the OPA August 2nd to remain operative until September 23rd. In a previous article published in the Courier the price ceiling on the various grades of eggs was given.

In this article the wholesale prices are given which are effective to August 26th.

Grade	Min. Wgt.	Wholesale per Dozen	Price
A Jumbo	28 oz.	57.9
A Extra Large	26 oz.	54.9
A Large	24 oz.	52.9
A Medium	21 oz.	48.9
A Small	18 oz.	44.9
B Large	24 oz.	46.9
B Medium	21 oz.	42.9
B Small	18 oz.	39.9
C Large	24 oz.	41.9
C Medium	21 oz.	37.9
C Small	18 oz.	33.9

"These prices have been fixed by the OPA and must be paid by the merchants when purchasing eggs by the wholesale. The merchants are entitled to a certain percentage of profit which is included in the ceiling price which they can charge when selling at retail. If they pay less for the eggs at wholesale, then the retail ceiling price must be proportionately less so as to conform to their percentage of profit. Therefore it must be evident to all that if the wholesale price of eggs is not maintained the retail schedule will be completely upset. Each is dependent upon the effectiveness of the other. Farmers and others who sell eggs at wholesale must insist on receiving the full wholesale price. Copies of this schedule can be obtained at the Bristol Rationing Board from the secretary of the Price Panel.

"Any effort on the part of merchants to purchase eggs cheaper than the scheduled prices should be reported to the Price Ceiling Panel for investigation. This bulletin is not issued in a spirit of criticism but simply to improve a situation which if not corrected immediately will eventually get beyond control. The Price Panel believes that co-operation and united endeavor can accomplish more than censure or prosecution. Hence the desire to work with and help the merchants instead of assuming an attitude of antagonism."

Can Toothsome Corn For Winter Season

of steaming hot home-canned corn on the dinner table next winter will be a welcome sight for the family. The following procedure is suggested:

1. Select corn that is at just the right stage for eating.
2. "One hour from garden to can" is a must for canning corn. Work as quickly as possible. Flat sour may develop when corn stands.
3. Prepare only enough corn for 6 to 8 pint jars at one time. Pints are better than quarts because there is less chance for spoilage in a small jar.
4. Cut off both ends of ears with a sharp knife or hatchet. Husks and silk fall off easily. Use stiff brush to remove silk that clings to ears.
5. Pre-cook corn either before or after cutting it from the cob. If pre-cooked after cutting from cob follow this procedure: For whole kernel corn, cut deep enough to remove most of kernel; don't scrape cob. Put cut corn in a kettle, cover with boiling water, and bring to a boil.

For cream style corn, cut off tops of kernels with a sharp knife, and scrape cob with the back of a knife. Add half as much boiling water as you have corn and bring to a boil.

To pre-cook corn before cutting from the cob: cook corn 5 minutes in boiling water, plunge ears in cold water until they are cool enough to handle, then cut corn from cob as for either whole kernel or cream style.

6. Pack hot corn into clean pint jars, add a half teaspoon of salt to each pint. Do not pack too tightly.
7. Fill jar to within 1 inch from top. Add water in which corn was pre-cooked to just cover corn. Heat reaches corn in center of jar quicker if jar contains some liquid.
8. Cover and seal jars according to type of closure used. As each jar is filled and sealed, put it into processing container.
9. In pressure cooker at 10 pounds pressure, processing time for pint jars is 60 minutes for whole kernel corn and 75 minutes for cream style corn. At end of this time, allow pressure gauge to return to zero before removing lid and taking out jars.
10. In boiling water bath, processing time for pint jars is 160 minutes for whole kernel corn and 180 minutes for cream style corn. Remove jars at once at end of processing time.
11. Complete seal where necessary and cool jars in an upright position.
12. Store cold jars in a dark, dry, cool place.
13. Boil all home-canned corn 10 minutes before tasting.
